- ★ Here are some tips to market your video to the masses:
 - ✓ Use social media to your advantage – all of it, including YouTube. Get more followers and broadcast your cause and your call to action “need for votes”
 - ✓ Find bloggers that can help you post your video and get the word out – it’s a great cause and I am confident almost anyone you ask will help you. Think small and big. One of our students went to a parenting blogger on Huffington Post, and it worked!
 - ✓ Hang flyers about your cause, your video and that you need their support at all of the local businesses downtown
 - ✓ Pass out flyers in front of the grocery store or a popular place those parents frequent. They are great supporters of bullying prevention for teens
 - ✓ Have your administration make morning announcements in your schools.
 - ✓ Hold assemblies at your neighborhood elementary, middle and high schools, show your video, then hand out the information about how to vote for you
 - ✓ Contact your local radio station and ask if they will broadcast your cause. Come up with a slogan, and at the end, your call to action is Vote for Us!
 - ✓ Contact Facebook and Twitter (the safety divisions) and ask them to post your videos. This will bring a much larger audience
 - ✓ Ask your parents to help. Work, friends, family, etc.
 - ✓ Get the organizations your involved in to help push the vote out in your state, and nationally. 4H did this for one of their members. They sent it out in their newsletters and via social media posts
 - ✓ Take an ad out in your local newspaper. We’re a non-profit, and you have a great cause (Stop Bullying!) so many students successfully did this this year, at no cost to them. Same with the radio
